TOP PROSPECTS
DON REYNOLDS
PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL GROUP
PLAYER EVALUATION

Player's Name
Bobby Gumere

Position
SS

Player's Number
33

Height
5'10"

Weight
150

Bats
Right

Team
Diamond Devils Scheno

Throws
Right

Evaluation Date
Sunday, July 25, 2021

ATHLETIC SKILLS

Feet
5 - Above Average

Comments
Basketball is his primary multi sport development and shows. Easy agile type actions. Very good balance.

Hands
4 - Slightly Above Average

Comments
Glove hand open on time. Real clean handle and transfer. No wasted action or glove roll. Steady Eddie.

Reactions
5 - Above Average

Comments
Very good athletic timing and instincts. Super efficient in his general actions, not much wasted or excess movement to any part of his game. One of the areas he really speeds the game up is with his speed/instincts/ aggressiveness on the bases.

Body Control

5 - Above Average

Comments

Smooth. Energy without effort. More "on time" athletically than wow you with quickness.

Strength

4 - Slightly Above Average

Comments

For his size and speed, his overall strength and stamina is just ok. Not a concern, but not yet an asset either. A primary area of development to focus in on the next 12-18 months.

Physical Development

4 - Slightly Above Average

Comments

If he's not interacting with regular strength training, he should consider starting soon. Band work and core work and hand wrist and forearm strength work. Adding a little mass would be beneficial as well.

BASEBALL SKILLS

Fielding

4 - Slightly Above Average

Comments

SS defender with a chance to remain at short. Starts every play from a good base and ready. Reads balls well. Takes proper angles. Hands play. Clean transfer. More of a high reliability guy than a flashy guy.

Range

4 - Slightly Above Average

Comments

Shows a knack for positioning himself well. Moves easy. Plays taller than low to the ground ala Tulowitski.

Running

5 - Above Average

Comments

His speed impacts the game, and he's regularly looking for opportunities to use it to advantage. Gets underway right away. Smart baserunner. Keeps his head up, knows how to read throws.

Arm Strength

4 - Slightly Above Average

Comments

Has his feet underneath him to throw. Arm works well. Showed a solid arm but I didn't see a plus arm and I don't recall him pitching.

Arm Accuracy

4 - Slightly Above Average

Comments

Fundamentally sound field and throw. Low elbow to throw on occasion. I noticed late in the event as games wore on his slot drifted a little. Reminder to stay on top of the ball and to follow throws for greater consistency.

Hitting Ability

5 - Above Average

Comments

Spread base. Slightly back with bat angled in set up to hit. Very quiet and minimal movement. Stays within himself. Spray contact stroke and approach. Patient/selective/athletic/contact/line drive/gap to gap. Good hand eye. Consistent hard/square contact.

Power Potential

3 - Average

Comments

More of a contact/on base type offensive threat than a banger. Core strength/ hand strength will factor in how much he has eventually.

PLAYER SUMMARY

Easily one of the most athletic players at this event. If he continues with baseball as a primary sport, there's every reason to think this player has the potential to be an area stand out type talent, and a primary contributor to a winning program. The components are here for a D1/Four year college player. Athletic in everything he does. Speed is where he shows his explosiveness and his separation from the rest of the players, and he doesn't hide it. Goes hard and smart on the bases. He doesn't overswing or try to do too much at the plate. Short, compact stroke, looking to get the ball in play hard. He plays hoops also, so hopefully he'll continue to train with the bat when he's on the hardwood. The defensive footwork of basketball is great cross training for IF defenders. I don't suspect the defensive part will be difficult to find once he makes his way out to the diamond.